3	I moved out of state and discovered that health insurance benefits are much worse than if i'd stayed in California. I've spent months looking at health plans, because the information from Tower Watson/One Exchange (where UC has outsourced health benefits for out of state Emiritus) is highly inaccurate. Since many of the plans (for example Blue Shield PPO or High Option are national (and operate that way for active employees) there is no justification for depriving out of state emiriti of the health benefits that in state retirees collect -- UC simplywants to save money. I have a feeling they would like to do this to ALL retired faculty and are starting by rolling out the diminished benefits to a group that's divided and dispersed. I have read online that many of the retired faculty who lost their benefits are extremely unhappy with this plan and feel betrayed by the University. I certainly do. Many have said they will no longer make contributions to UC or leave money to UC after they die because of this policy. I feel the same way. I resent wasting weeks and weeks investigating individual health plans and paying thousands of dollars more every year for prescription drugs because I've been deprived of group benefits after working at UC most of my adult life because I wanted to live near my family when I retired. In the future, I will volunteer my time and money to organizations other than UC.	11/14/2015 10:11 AM
